THIRTY-FOURTH YEAR NO. 38.

CEDARVILLE, OHIO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1911.

PRICE, $1.00 A YEAR

SUNDAY MATINEE; THREE WOUNDED.

The "business administration" has had more business this week than any time since Mayor Andrew was inaugurated into office twenty months ago. "Something doing every minute" might be a good slogan for the village but just at present there seems to be no necessity of home owners providing themselves with shot guns and having them loaded and hung over the front door.

The matinee last Sabbath morning resulted in several being wounded in a drunken brawl along the creek opposite the "Flax-mill pond". Near a dozen men, all colored except one, had gathered to discuss the recent primary result and decide on a suitable candidate to defeat the nominee, W. R. Kennon. To assist in the deliberations a jug of elder had been provided and it went through the hardening process by the addition of a quart of "Old Jones" whiskey, which alone would cause mutiny in a regiment of soldiers.

The action of the liquor on the elder was too much for those who indulged in it and a general fight was started. Frank Wisecup, white, was struck a blow on the head that stunned him and in a few minutes a general fight was on with a half dozen participating. Wisecup was against the field and put up a strong defense but finding the enemy too much for him picked up the jug and landed a blow on George Read's head, inflicting a wound and at the same time breaking the vessel. Wisecup held to the handle and used it as a weapon of defence. Wiley Jones received a bad cut on the arm that bled profusely, causing him to fall in a faint and weakened condition. James Baker is said to have had a finger badly bitten by Wisecup, but he and his brother, Joe, took to a corn field when the officers appeared and have not been seen up to this time.

In Mayor's court several have been fined as follows: Wisecup, $2 and costs; Read, $5 and costs; Webster, $10 and costs; Wiley Jones $5 and costs.

The case against Sally Baker, which was to have been tried Wednesday was withdrawn and the defendant is said to have taken no part in the trouble other than getting her sons away.

It was first reported that the trouble was over George Read being charged at the paper mill but later reports show that an effort was being made to agree on another candidate for marshal. The majority of the crowd wanted H. A. McLean to run on an independent ticket but Wisecup, being a Democrat, would not stand for that and insisted on the crowd supporting James Baker, who was coming on the Democrat ticket.

WANTED—Good Housekeeping

Magazine requires the services of a representative in Cedarville, to look after subscription renewals and to extend circulation by special method which have proved unusually successful. Salary and commission. Previous experience desirable, but not essential. Whole time or spare time. Address, with references J. F. Fairbanks, Good Housekeeping Magazine, 681 Fourth Ave., New York City.

Depot Entered Wednesday Night.

The depot was broken into some time Wednesday night, entrance being made by prying up a back window. Two trunks belonging to Mrs. Lorimer and her daughter, Miss Maude, of New Concord, were opened and the contents scattered about the floor.

An inspection by the owners revealed that nothing was missing and it is thought the parties were looking for money. Besides valuable dress goods there were fine laces and some silverware, none of which were taken. A bread basket in the room was opened and five loaves were taken, which gives the act a local coloring. There was nothing to indicate but that the work was done by inexperienced parties.

The railroad detectives have taken up the case but there is little to work upon. Cedarville seems to be enveloped in a wave of crime, such as follows an administration that is lax on law enforcement and indifference as to handling offenders.

Next Week.

The third annual Jamestown Fair will be held next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. There will be three good races each day and three big acts by a novelty troupe twice daily. Each morning will find special attractions. For exhibits there will be an abundance of entries in all classes. The races will be the feature of the fair and early entries in the largest number of horses ever on the grounds.

Because he was given the "double-cross" by the wets and drays, Mayor John H. Funderburg, the Blue-law Mayor of Yellow Springs, has announced that when his docket is cleared of the present cases, no new ones will be tried.

The mayor states that from the results of the recent primary the people of Yellow Springs do not approve of his policy and want no more liquor cases tried before him. From cases already tried the mayor assessed fines to the amount of about $3,800, part of which when collected will go into the county treasury and the remainder to Yellow Springs.

"In going into the cases I thought I would be doing the village a service as well as serving the ends of justice, for through the cases several hundred dollars will go into the village treasury," said the mayor, "but judging from the election results I take it the citizens have not approved of my course."

Prosecutor Johnson will file future cases in the Common Pleas Court. Under the law Mayor Funderburg or any other mayor can be compelled to hear liquor cases but it is not thought that such action will be taken.

Last Friday, Mayor Funderburg heard the charge of keeping a place against Isaac Wisterman and found the defendant guilty. Only one witness was introduced in the case, Rev. W. B. Graham of Yellow Springs, who was in the drugstore at the time the raid was made and credits the following statement to Wisterman:

"I have conducted the liquor business as respectfully as it can be conducted and not everyone can get liquor here." Prosecutor Johnson represented the State and Judge Marcus Shoup was counsel for the defendant. Only three other cases, all for keeping a place.

The liquor case against C. M. Riggway which was to have been tried Thursday was postponed until next Thursday, owing to the state not being ready for trial.

What About The Officers.

The mosquitoes are becoming more and more plentiful every day. Some time ago the good people of this town donated money to purchase oil to be used to prevent mosquitoes.

Mr. Little and other leading men in the paper mill were consulted and expressed themselves as being perfectly willing to do anything that was just and right, saying that, if we had oil and wished to use it on reservoirs we could, or they would get oil and put on. They have very kindly offered to do all and more than we asked.

Oil has been purchased and is here ready to use and money in bank to get more if needed.

Our officers have been asked and plead with to see to putting it on properly, but they have failed to act.

The mosquitoes are bringing such discomfort and suffering to our homes and scattering diseases throughout our community. Our officers and people are keeping them here from choice.

THE OLD TUNES.

There's no modern music like 'em
The songs we used to know
But I've forgotten most of 'em
For it's been so long ago,
Since we used to sing 'em—Bill and I
When our long day's work was done
And we'd sit on the door-yard
Long about the set of sun.

That's about the set of sun. (Porch)
I seem to recall that Bill and I
And it sets my nerves a-quiver
To hear 'im sing "In Dixie Land"
And "Down on the Swannee River"
There's a lot of music in 'em
Them songs of long ago,
And Bill has a way of singin'
The tune of "Old Black Joe"

That I sorter want to howl my head
And again to grasp his hand,
For it seems to stir a tender feelin'
That he alone could understand.

Yes, there's lots of music in 'em
Them dear, sweet tunes of old
And now since Bill has mentioned it
"Twas "Silver Threads among the Gold"

That Pa and Ma both loved to hear,
They'd make us sing it o'er and o'er
As they rocked and rocked in the Old armed chair

Just inside the cabin door.
Since both of 'em have passed away
Bill's voice would never hold
To the music of the grand old song—
"Silver Threads among the Gold."

And so I love the dear old tunes
Though my singing lips are dumb.
I'll be quite well contented
When my partin' time has come
If I can hear Bill sing them songs,
I'll go without a sigh
To "Canaan's fair and happy land
Where my possessions lie."

—Fred F. Marshall.

HISTORIC DARK DAYS.

In the Year 626 Half of the Sun Was Obscured For Eight Months.

In the year 358, just before the earthquake of Nicomedia, the darkness was very dense from two to three hours. Two years afterward in all the provinces of the Roman empire there was obscurity from early dawn to noon. The stars were visible, and its duration precludes the idea of a solar eclipse. At the return of light the sun appeared first in a crescent form; then half its face was seen and was gradually restored to its whole visible disk.

In 409 the stars were seen by day at Rome. About 536 the sun was obscured for fourteen months, so that very little of his light was seen. In 567 such darkness prevailed from 3 p. m. till night that nothing could be seen. In 626 half the sun's disk was obscured for eight months. In 733 he was again darkened, and people were generally terrified.

In 934 Portugal was in darkness for two months, the sun having lost its brightness. The heavens were then opened in fissures by strong flashes of lightning, when there was suddenly bright sunlight. On Sept. 21, 1091, the sun was darkened for three hours. On Feb. 28, 1206, for six hours complete darkness turned the day into night. In 1241, on Michaelmas day, the stars were visible at 3 p. m. In 1547, April 23 to 25, three days, the sun was so obscured that many stars were visible at once. Thus says Humboldt in Cosmos.

If we come almost to our own time, to May 19, 1790, history and tradition assert the occurrence of a remarkable day prevailing over New England, at least, and considerably in some other places. It came on between 10 and 11 a. m. and continued until midnight, growing gradually darker and darker or even till 11 at night. Candles and lamps were lighted for the people to see to dine and perform work about the house. These became requisite before 12 o'clock m. In the evening so dense was it that farmers could scarcely, even with the aid of a lantern, grope their way to the barn to take care of the cattle. The birds retired to their roosts at 11 a. m., and the day was converted into night.

MUST BE OVERCOME.

It is said that the prime object of Billy Sunday's visit to Springfield is to so stir the city by a religious awakening that when the regular election comes in November a better class of office holders will be chosen by the electorate.

Since the Rose county local option election party lines have been cast to the winds and wet Republicans, Democrats, Socialists and followers of other parties who wanted a drink have united on candidates in sympathy with their views. Consequently a Republican county has suffered the loss of the wet vote and several Democrats are calling at the treasurer's office monthly.

There are many Republican leaders in Clark county that actively oppose the liberal element regardless of what it costs the party and these same men are expecting Billy Sunday to upheave present conditions and bring about the election of a law enforcement administration.

All this brings to mind the recent primary in Xenia when Wm. Dodds was re-nominated for mayor. Many held that as a result of the Biederwolf meetings last winter, there would be no trouble in getting Wm's scalp.

The primary is over and at a recent W. C. T. U. convention in Xenia it was held that 640 supposedly dry voters were indifferent and remained away from the polls, which allowed Dodds to be re-nominated by a larger vote than two years ago.

The indifference of local option supporters must be overcome before the hold of the opposition can be broken.

The government prosecuted the sugar trust and the employees that defrauded by false weights but the tide has turned and the trust is now persecuting the people by daily advancing the price on the excuse of a shortage in the cane crop. Those who keep in touch with the sugar market predict that sugar will cost 10 cents per pound in another month and probably 12 1-2 cents by the new year. The result of the sudden advance will result in the buying public demanding the removal of the tariff and allowing foreign sugar to come into this country. One sugar company has printed on the back of each 25 pound sack a notice to consumers to urge their congressmen and senators to vote for free sugar in that the price would be lowered. Congress this next session must deal with the food products issue and break the combination that seems to exist. With the price of hogs going down and smoked meats soaring, the average consumer cannot be made to believe that the law of supply and demand has anything to do with it. By the fast reciprocity measure Canada hogs and cattle will come into this country at a lower price for the meat trust while dressed and smoked meats will remain the same or sold at an advance, a fair sample of the fast idea of lowering the cost of living.

I can give you the best prices on any quantity of ice cream. Marshall.

TO WOO SLEEP.

Better a Rug on the Floor Than a Too Yielding Mattress.

"I sleep fairly well," a man said recently, "but seldom soundly, and I frequently wake in the morning with aches in my legs, joints and vertebrae. I never feel supple until I have had my cold bath and a brisk rub with a rough towel."

Sleep should be invigorating, not enervating, and the following theory was advanced by a man who in his earlier days had slept for many months under the stars on veldt and in jungle:

"It is the mattress and the pillow that are responsible for half the trouble of the insomniac. The ideal resting place is the ground, with its natural covering of soft grass. The next most comfortable bed is a wood floor overlaid with a soft carpet or rug. The yielding mattress does not rest the muscles, which remain all night in a condition of alternating relaxation and tension. When the sleeping place is fixed and hard they adapt themselves to it and remain quiescent."

"Furthermore, the spine and nerve centers of the bed sleeper are exposed all night to the heat of the mattress, which is the cause of the sense of enervation so commonly felt when one awakens."

"This pillow is even more enervating than the mattress. A well stuffed saddle whose cleft center permits circulation of air, soft, yet unyielding, is the ideal head rest. Next to it perhaps should be placed the Japanese neck block. "When the discomfort of the experiment has been overcome by a few nights of perseverance a wonderful improvement will be discerned in the quality of sleep."—Harper's Weekly.

Wanted Bread, Had Courage. One day, riding along the road, General Gordon came upon a regimental prayer meeting, which was very impressive. The men were kneeling or standing with bowed heads about the chaplain, who was praying in a voice of wonderful compass. The general checked his horse and removed his hat and waited for the end of the prayer. The chaplain asked the Lord to give the men of Lee's army supreme courage to meet the great crisis that had come upon them, fortitude to bear new privations and troubles, strength to fight against the pursuing enemy. Just then a tall private rose from his knees and shouted to the chaplain: "Pray for bread, chaplain, pray for bread! We have courage to spare, but to fight we must have something to eat. Pray for bread!" This broke up the prayer meeting.

An Inappropriate Letter. After a "command" performance in Queen Victoria's time it was the custom for her majesty's secretary to send a letter of thanks to the responsible manager. Sir Henry Ponsonby, upon whom this duty devolved, was the pink of politeness and, not wishing to make any invidious distinction, drew up a form of letter for general use. As a rule this plan worked well, but on one occasion the proprietor of a troupe of performing geese, which had entertained the royal children at a Windsor garden party, received the following communication from Sir Henry: "Sir—I am instructed by the queen to thank you for your visit of yesterday and to express the hope that the ladies and gentlemen of your company arrived safely in London and in good health."

Importance of Salt. Salt production is about the oldest industry in the world. In Italy, the cradle of the salt industry, it has been manufactured commercially for 2,500 years. Salt is so necessary to existence that in some parts of the world tribes will sell the members of their families in exchange for salt. Salt has been the cause of wars, and so important has it always been considered that in some places the passing of salt is established as a token of friendship, and women throw salt on a visitor as a friendly greeting. In some countries salt is so scarce that it is obtained through the ashes of grasses and a species of palm and other plants.—Manufacturers' Record.

Something Coming. A Capitol Avenue lad of eight wished to go fishing, but his mama refused to permit him to go near the water. Johnny nevertheless slipped out and went to Fall creek, where he fished for an hour or more. On his way home he met a neighbor, who was surprised to see Johnny carrying a fishpole. "Hello, Johnny," said the neighbor. "Been fishing?" "Yes, sir," Johnny answered. "What did you catch?" "W-w-why, I haven't been home yet."—Indianapolis News.

—Such delicious goodness as you will find in Bonano comes only from the blending of many varieties of bananas which, because of their delicacy, are not taken out of the tropics. These bananas are used when they are fully ripened—not before—just when nature has perfected in them all their rich food value and flavor. We peel them and dry them. The dried pulp or meat of the fruit—containing all there is of goodness in the banana—we bring to our American factory and there granulate it and roast it, just as coffee is roasted.

ORANGE FILEFISH.

The Bite That Caused Them to Become Camel Backed.

"Oh, mother, see the camel fish!" So cried the small girl in excited and delighted wonder as with her mother she walked along in front of the tanks at the aquarium, and surely it seemed as if the fish she pointed out must be one of a species bearing that name. As a matter of fact, though, the name of the fish was not camel fish, though it had two humps. It was an orange filefish, its humps illustrating the vicissitudes attending fish life in the sea.

The orange filefish is not pretty, but it is curious and interesting. It has a deep and very thin body, like a flatfish swimming on edge, and in swimming it carries its body at an angle, head downward. For the origin of one part of its name it is in color orange, tinted and brown and white, and the file part of its name comes from the fact that it has rising from its head a long file shaped spine which it can raise or fold down along on its body at will.

From the top of its high back in front of the head of the filefish slopes down sharply to its snout; from the top of its back at the other end there is a sharp slope down to its tail. This gives the fish a high, thin ridge along the midlength of its back, and how this particular filefish came to be camel backed was as follows:

Some much bigger fish that once encountered it in the sea made a dive for it and got it squarely midway of the length of its back and simply bit a piece out of it there, as a human being might bite a piece out of a slice of bread, leaving in the filefish's back an incurving line of about the same sweep and dimensions. Such a wound would have killed most fish of ordinary build, but it did not prove mortal to this deep bodied filefish. The marks of the teeth that bit that piece out of it are still visible on the filefish's side.

Coming just where the bite did, square in the middle of the length of the back, which slopes down sharply at either end, the scooped out place at the center gives this filefish the appearance of having two humps.—New York Sun.

"Had Had Had"

"While you're discussing the peculiarities of the English language," remarked a publisher, "has it ever struck you that the word 'had' can, with perfect correctness, occur three times successively in an ordinary English sentence? No? Well, it can. Only the other evening I came across an instance. It was at the meeting of a certain association. I am interested in, and there the secretary in reading the minutes said, 'The chairman of the committee then reported that the trouble which he had had had now been overcome.'"

"That's interesting," chimed in the literary man, "but it's nothing to the possibilities of recurrence we can correctly get out of the word 'that.' You may say that that 'that' that that speaker indicated was not that 'that' that that gentleman intended."

Might Have Changed History.

If Oskar Becker had aimed true on June 14, 1861, the map of Europe might not be what it is today. On that day at Baden Baden Becker, twenty-two years old, waited for King William of Prussia in the park where he usually walked and, when he appeared in company with Count Fleming, fired a pistol shot in his direction. The man was captured by people who were much more excited than the sturdy king, who kept on his walk despite the slight wound on his neck. Becker was sentenced to twenty years' prison service, but the king pardoned him in 1866. He went to the United States and two years later died at Alexandria, Egypt.

How Cossacks Catch Fish.

The Cossacks on some of the rivers in Russia have a singular method of catching the funny tribe in winter. They cut a long trench across a river when frozen and run a net from one bank to the other; then, riding several miles up the stream, they form a line across the frozen surface and gallop their horses down toward the nets. The fish, hearing the noise and clatter of hoofs, become frightened, dart with a rush down stream and are thus entangled in the net.

Too Much.

Silas—I hear some wandering piano tuner knocked the stuffin' out of Hi Jones.

Hank—Yas; ye know what a feller Hi is for gettin' th' wuth o' his money. Wal, he wanted th' tuner to throw in an oilin' o' the windmill and a repairin' o' th' movin' machine, all for th' same money.—Chicago News.
